

Arik Dayan, Chief Executive Officer

“Water is the most important resource known to man and water scarcity is one of the greatest challenges that we face. With demand for water expected to double by 2020, the management, conservation, treatment and recycling of the world’s supply is of increasing necessity.”

Arik joined Amiad in 1997 as General Manager of the company’s subsidiary in Singapore. Since then, he has held several senior positions, including International Business Development Executive and Vice President of Sales and Marketing.

He was appointed Chief Executive Officer in 2009.

During this time, Arik has been instrumental in growing the company and its international reach, particularly in Asia and South America, and through the successful acquisition of Arkal Filtration Systems in 2010. In addition, Arik was part of the senior executive team that met with investors during Amiad’s IPO in December 2005.

Prior to joining Amiad, Arik was the Managing Director of SunGard Business Integration in the Asia Pacific region and Director of Sales and Marketing at Epilady.

In addition to his role as CEO of Amiad, Arik has also undertaken other causes and activities including:

Chairman of the Executive Committee at the Tel-Hai Academic College (May 2011 – Present)

Chairman of the Water Sector at the Israeli Export and International Cooperation Institute, Public Management Department (July 2011 – Present)

Member of the IWW Industrial Leaders Forum – a forum that seeks to discuss and present practical solutions to resolve the ever challenging water demands around the world. (Nov 2011 - Present)
