

Yonatan Bukhdruker

For the past 4 years Yonatan has been a Project Manager at Pears Program for Global Innovation, responsible for market entry processes for companies and startups, working with them to unlock opportunities in low and middle income countries, adapt and build partnerships.

Before joining the Pears Program team, Yonatan served as the International Financial Institutions Director in the Trade Mission of Israel in Washington D.C. for the last three years. He managed Israel's relationships with institutions such as the World Bank and the IDB and provided the Israeli private sector with infrastructure and support in their engagement with these institutions, while promoting development goals and enhancing collaboration with developing countries.

Yonatan has a BA degree in communications from the Interdisciplinary Center Hertzliya, including a year in Argov Honors Program in Leadership and Diplomacy.
